Still writing estimates at the kitchen table?

Your past bids can write the next one.

Every estimate is unpaid work, and only you can do it. Contractors on the trade forums put a custom bid at 2 to 8 hours. Illustration: 16 estimates a month at 6 hours each is 96 hours, two and a half work weeks of nights and weekends. Put in your own numbers.

Sound familiar?

Nights and weekends. "Easily wasted a Saturday or Sunday doing estimates and paperwork." a retired contractor, trade forum

You're the bottleneck. "I'm just estimating that I can't keep up." a Tennessee remodeler

The slow bid loses. "I use to do bids through text messages until somebody asked me for a 'formal bid'… I lost that job." an electrician

The hours. "When I do an estimate for a job over, let's say, $100K, I'll probably spend cumulatively like 40+ hours on it." the remodeler

The costly miss. "I was probably out between those 3, maybe like $25,000." the remodeler, on three bad bids

Cookie-cutter software. "I end up having to change most numbers as it does not reflect real world costs." review of an estimating app

What changes: an engine built from your own bids

- ✓ It learns from your past bids. Your format, your prices, your words. Not cookie-cutter.
- ✓ It drafts the next one for you. Describe the job, then check it and send it.
- ✓ It won't guess. Every number shows its math. No rate for something? It stops and asks.
- ✓ Set up for you. In your own account, installed with you on one call, in about two weeks.

What owners say

- ✓ "This was a very easy process. I'm impressed with your professionalism and I'm excited to use my new AI…" Chris Wolf, Wolf & Wolf
- ✓ "I've never seen anyone do this… with blue-collar guys especially, there is an allergy to paperwork." Justin, a Tennessee remodeler
- ✓ "…it changed the way I do bids and proposals, and it saves me a ton of time, probably more than half." Nate Stein, electrician, after Suk's AI training

Is this you?

- ✓ You, or your spouse, write the estimates.
- ✓ You send 8 or more a month.
- ✓ Your past bids exist somewhere: files, spreadsheets, accounting software or paper.

All three? It was built for you.

And every bid gets followed up, so more of them turn into jobs. Ask about Bid Follow-Up.
